If you want to get a head start and learn to use Photoshop, you may find this guide useful: In this guide, we'll explain how to use all the tools in Photoshop for a great way of editing, creating and retouching photos. First of all, Photoshop will always be your most important tool for editing photos, illustrations, etc. 1. Download and install Photoshop You'll need to be on the latest version of the software. The latest version is available for both Windows and Mac users. Windows: Download Photoshop If you don't have Photoshop, you can download the latest version for Windows here. Mac: Download Photoshop Alternatively, you may download the latest version of Photoshop for Mac here. Once you have installed the application, you can start using Photoshop. 2. Open Photoshop Once you're done installing and downloading Photoshop, you'll be greeted by the Photoshop splash screen. You may also be guided to the Adobe website by default. If you don't want to use the default start screen, you can change it by going to Photoshop > Preferences > General. You'll notice a few choices, including Start Screen and Start Menu. Click on Start Screen in the middle of the screen to change it. In some older versions of Photoshop, you won't even have Start Screen as an option. You can also add folders for your favorite applications or remove folders to get a simpler desktop. Click on the Options button, and look for Folders. If you want, you can make your Photoshop start screen icons more minimal by doing the following: Open Photoshop > Preferences > General. Look for Desktop Icons. Click on Show and select Show Desktop Icons and Background Images. This will make it so Photoshop will not only display icons on your desktop, but you will also have a background. 3. Change the Appearance of Photoshop Let's start with changing the appearance of your Photoshop desktop. You'll see a lot of options to change the appearance of your Photoshop desktop. The layout is customizable and easy to change. Click on the Options button near the bottom of the preferences window to see a list of options. You'll see different options in this list: As you scroll down the list, you'll notice a681f4349e

Q: Why does my PHP email not send to @myserver.com but works fine when using @localhost? I'm using Windows 7 32 bit OS with Apache/PHP 5.3.4/MySQL 5.5.16 on a VPS. I've set the email options to: `smtp_server = smtp.gmail.com` `smtp_port = 465` `smtp_encryption = ssl` `ssl_security = none` `smtp_starttls = yes` `smtp_auth = yes` I can send test emails to the @localhost but not to @myserver.com even though they both point to the same IP address. Here's my code:

define('SMTP_IP', '@myserver.com'); define('SMTP_PORT', 465); define('SMTP_ENCRYPTION','ssl'); define('SMTP_SSL_SECURITY', 'none'); require "class.phpmailer.php"; function SendTestEmail($emailTo, $message) { global $SMTP_IP, $SMTP_PORT; $mail = new PHPMailer(); $mail->CharSet = 'UTF-8'; $mail->Host = SMTP_IP; $mail->Port = SMTP_PORT; $mail->IsSMTP(); $mail->SMTPAuth = SMTP_ENCRYPTION; $mail->SMTPSecure = SMTP_SSL_SECURITY; $mail->Username ='someemail@gmail.com'; $mail->Password ='somepassword'; $mail->From = SMTP_IP; $mail->FromName = 'Test'; $mail->Subject = 'Test'; $mail->Body = $message; $mail->AddAddress($emailTo, $emailTo); $mail->Send(); } What am I doing wrong? A: Solved. See

What's New In?

Chicago hopes legal weed will get a tax break in Illinois this year. About $100 million will be added to the city's budget because of an anticipated rush in tax revenue this year. Bill Wildman, Chief Finance Officer, says, "It was not a calculated thing in any respect." Revenue from Illinois' medical marijuana industry has been a boon to that state. And now Chicago, which started issuing licenses to businesses in the legal weed business after voters approved the change, plans to capitalize. Chicago hoped to raise $100 million in taxes on those businesses this year, but so far it hasn't gotten there. However, with a limit on medical marijuana flower sales, a grower expansion tax and a transfer tax on medical marijuana distribution, revenue is only about $25 million short so far. Listen Listening... / 1:30 It's a new business that some people have been waiting for, a business that many Illinoisans are in line for, and two businesses that have been operating in secret for the last year, waiting for the state to make it legal. The Illinois Department of Agriculture is finalizing rules for growing cannabis at a facility in the Southern Illinois town of McLean. It will be the first industrial cannabis facility. "There's a lot of regulations," says Ronda Belanger, a farm consultant in McLean. "We have to be very careful not to have any pesticides, and not to have anything that's going to harm the environment." Belanger has been following the rulemaking process since the Department of Agriculture first launched the draft rules in September. She says she's never seen a rulemaking so far out, but it's a process that takes years. "They took a lot of input from industry and agriculture, and municipal, because this is going to be a rural project," Belanger says. Belanger has been through this process once before, when the department initially announced it would allow farmers and home-growers to apply for state licenses to grow industrial cannabis. Belanger says it was a regulatory hurdle for the agriculture industry, as well as for home growers who aren't allowed to sell their product unless the state says it's OK. On Tuesday, the department announced the rules for growing. Agricultural Commissioner Charles Jones says it's now up to companies like his, the agriculture department
