This mod unlocks the Pantheon of Asura, which is a new race in Divinity: Original Sin 2. They're offering a new way of thinking, which is comparable to the perspective of an elf (more laidback, old-school.) There are three new followers, who are ready to be your 'adopted children'. Currently they cannot choose the Pantheon, which is why the mod is pretty much compatible with any other mod that's out there, except for some lost "minigames", which will be displayed after a lore

A: If you want something similar to Skyrim but with less nudity, check out Path of Exile. It's a free, online, roguelike action game with a third person view and a decent story mode, and the characters can dress and undress. It's not exactly in the same genre as Skyrim, but since it's free it's also a lot less work to produce. There are several people making high quality stories and costume mods, including one that adds the items of the protagonists father. Both of these are in development, and Bethesda themselves have stated that they'll be open to paying for mods for their games, but they don't comment on whether or not they'll be involved. According to German manufacturer Skoda, its budget-conscious electrical vehicle range, which arrived on the market last month, will be joining the growing ranks of fully electric cars – a big leap forward for the company which has been traditionally known for its economical car models. The Czech manufacturer is already pushing the boundaries of technology by developing a supercapacitor-based electric powertrain, a breakthrough which would be a boon for fuel cell vehicles which are far too expensive and bulky. The new range of cars, which are expected to be available in model year 2020, will be the first offering from the company which has been positioned among the world's top luxury car manufacturers. The model range will include the stylish T6 hatchback and estate, the compact T4 five-door and the archetypal ŠKODA KODIAQ for the mid-sized premium segment of the market. Announced earlier this year, the ŠKODA Arona compact SUV, which will be slotted in between the KODIAQ and T6 was recently presented to the media at the global motor show in Frankfurt. "Electrical vehicles are the future of automobile engineering and technology. This is definitely a platform on which we can be successful in the mid-size premium segment," said Stefano D'Amore, CEO of SEAT. "I am thrilled to be supporting SEAT in today's electrification push of the global automotive industry, as our partnership stretches far beyond concept cars. "The SEAT-ŠKODA partnership will ensure excellent synergy, commercial success and an enabling ecosystem 3da54e8ca3
