The baby boy is claimed to have god-like strength and the mother becomes passive and allows him to do all the work. In this journey of postnatal care, the baby has to be studied closely to find out how normal the baby is and how the mother and baby are coping up with different adjustments. The baby's birth weight. The baby should be weighed within the first hour of birth as this is the only way to observe its growth and development and it will help the mother to see what her baby's average body weight is. This should be done to see whether the baby's birth weight corresponds to the weight of the baby which was read from the birth record. How normal is the growth? The baby should be observed for the next forty-eight hours after birth to know the normal growth pattern of the baby. The baby should be weighed every day after birth and any weight loss should be noted. It is better to start weighing on the day of delivery as this will tell you if the baby is gaining or losing weight at the same rate as before. The baby's growth rate. Every baby should be weighed regularly. The baby's growth should be checked at intervals of every half an hour for the first forty-eight hours and every eight hours for the next forty-eight hours. Growth rate of the baby will be noted as the baby is observed for the next forty-eight hours after birth. The baby should be re-weighed after the first two days after delivery and its weight should be compared to the weight which was noted on the day of delivery. The rate of weight gain should be noted. What should be noted? If the baby is gaining weight at the same rate as before delivery then the baby is in good health. This is an important thing to know as it gives an idea of how much the baby can be supplemented with baby food. In case of low or no weight gain, the baby should be monitored and the mother should 3e33713323
