Q: Detecting Enter Key press in EditText in android I am having following problem in android: I want to be able to detect if the user has pressed the Enter key in an EditText. Is there any way to do this? I have tried few solutions posted on stackoverflow. None of them worked for me. One solution is the following: `@Override public boolean onKeyDown(int keyCode, KeyEvent event) { if ((keyCode == KeyEvent.KEYCODE_ENTER)) { return true; } return super.onKeyDown(keyCode, event); }` It was not working for me because when I used it I don't get any call back from the code. Then I tried the following: `@Override public boolean onKeyDown(int keyCode, KeyEvent event) { if ((keyCode == KeyEvent.KEYCODE_ENTER)) { return true; } return super.onKeyDown(keyCode, event); }` It didn't work because then the code never gets called and I never get any information from the dialog box. Then I tried a third solution posted on stackoverflow. It was not working because I was calling the code inside a service. The method I was calling was "onKeyDown". Which was not correct. Then I got a different solution which works for me. Like this: `@Override public boolean onKeyDown(int keyCode, KeyEvent event) { if ((keyCode == KeyEvent.KEYCODE_ENTER)) { return true; } return super.onKeyDown(keyCode, event); }` As you can see I replaced 'keyCode' with 'event'. And it works. A: Then I tried a third solution posted on stackoverflow. That is the correct solution. how to know whether the user has pressed the enter key on the keyboard inside onCreate() The above code does that. You can see it in action, with a demonstration of how to use the code We will first start with the base project, with

The Yankees have dipped into the free-agent market with a big splash, agreeing to a five-year, $153 million contract with right-hander CC Sabathia. He will be paid $30 million annually, then has an opt-out clause after 2013. Sabathia, who will turn 35 in December, was leading the league in wins and allowing the fewest runs per game before going on the disabled list with a right forearm bruise in June, when he allowed five runs over five innings in a 9-1 loss to the Orioles. Sabathia, who made $15.5 million in 2011, after signing a seven-year, $161 million contract in December 2009, will receive a $22 million signing bonus. The remaining $31 million is paid in installments, $2.5 million in each of the first four seasons, and $10 million in the final season. The Yankees were said to be seeking a deal with a guaranteed $20 million annual value, but with Sabathia set to play his entire contract, the figure was lowered. His new contract is similar to what the Cardinals gave Chris Carpenter in 2009. Sabathia is one of many big-name free agents the Yankees have pursued. Their pursuit of the right-hander was aided by their three-year, $39 million deal for third baseman Scott Rolen last week. For the Yankees, it was a season of change. General manager Brian Cashman, who has replaced Steinbrenner as manager, worked to acquire the two biggest acquisitions of his career: Sabathia and Rolen. Cashman and his personnel department had been trying to get Sabathia since 2002, when he was with the Brewers, who drafted him in the second round of the 1992 amateur draft. The Yankees got $20 million for Sabathia in their small-market 2005 World Series championship. Sabathia, a protege of former Yankees pitching coach Mel Stottlemyre, spent 2009 in Cleveland, where he pitched with a fractured skull, a fractured elbow and Tommy John surgery to reconstruct his ulnar collateral ligament. Sabathia posted a 12-10 record with a 3.15 ERA in 25 starts for the Yankees after the 2004 season. He was traded to the Brewers in August 2007 and went to the Cleveland Indians in August 2008. CC Sabathia agreed to a five-year, $153 million contract to return to the Yankees on
