A member of the Bundestag, Rosenfeld was instrumental in the preparations of the 1947 partition plan for Mandatory Palestine, and also served as a member of the Jewish Agency executive from 1950 to 1953. Biography Hermann Rosenfeld was born into a Jewish family in Leipzig in the German Empire. He attended the Freiberg Gymnasium in his hometown and studied law at the University of Würzburg. After being called to the bar in 1921 he moved to Mandatory Palestine and joined the Haganah. He was a member of the Jewish Agency executive and the Jewish National Fund executive. In 1931 he was elected to the First Knesset as the member for the district of Lod. In 1937 he was a member of the delegation that negotiated the Peel Commission's partition plan, in which he was a strong proponent of the establishment of a separate Arab state, the United Arab Republic, and a Jewish state. Rosenfeld was a member of the Jewish Agency executive from 1950 to 1953 and was a member of the Yavneh-based left-wing Zionist Vaad Leumi. In 1959 he was a member of the delegation that negotiated the Rabin-Sadat peace accord. In 1961 he was a candidate in the first Knesset elections on the National Religious Party list. Although he lost his seat, he became a member of the Israeli delegation to the United Nations. He was a member of the Knesset Finance Committee, the Foreign Affairs and Defense Committee, the Finance Committee, and the Committee on the Status of Women and the Committee on Refugees. In 1962 Rosenfeld became the first president of the Bikur Cholim Foundation, a Jewish charity that cares for the elderly. In the same year he was among those who established the Israel Prize. In 1966, he published the book, Emunah (faith
