Questions: My MacBook Pro runs 10.9.5. If I have an mpeg file on my MacBook Pro, how can I play it on my MacBook? A: You need MPlayer to play your mpeg video file. Go to software center search for MPlayer. Install it. Then start your video file with Mplayer. With a lot of luck you do not need to convert or transcode the video first. Q: Assigning the values of a DOM element to an object Let's say I have a div with the id content and I want to store all the values of this element to an object. But let's say the element is not in the DOM so I have to get all of its value to a variable. `var content = $("#content")[0].value;` If I do that, I have to assign it to the content property of the object like this: `var myObject = { content: content };` But this is too verbose. Is there a way to do that in a shorter and more elegant way? A: You could use an immediate object literal. See the last example in the linked question: `var myObject = { content: $("#content").val() };` `console.log(myObject.content);` This isn't necessarily more elegant, but it would likely be easier to read. I would avoid using the object literal form for anything longer than two lines, though. The invention relates to a vehicle seat, particularly to a vehicle seat for passengers of an aircraft. In aircraft, there is generally a seat for each passenger, which seat is optionally arranged in a row in the direction of travel. The seat width or the thickness of the seat in the direction of travel is generally chosen such that at least one leg or the underarm resting on the seat can be adjusted relative to the body of the passenger, in order to be able to make optimal
