I've created a URL route using the following regex: [HttpGet] [Route("{*path}")] public IActionResult(string path) The string is a path, I'm not interested in the path but the hash, I'm going to use the path and hash to display a URI. This is the URL with the hash I want to catch: This is the URL I want to avoid: The problem is that it catches both of them. I've tried different regex but no matter what I try I can't get that '#' to be ignored. A: You can use the [ApiController] attribute like this: [Route("api/values/foo/#bar")] [ApiController] public class ValuesController : ControllerBase { } The reason it isn't working without the [ApiController] attribute is because the [HttpGet] attribute cannot be applied to controllers. Here is a link to a GitHub discussion about that - High resolution strain mapping using multimodal registration. A multimodal method for mapping mechanical strain distributions in the heart using anatomical landmarks is presented. Multispectral magnetic resonance images are acquired using a fast spin echo sequence at 3T in an 8 x 8 FOV (FOV) during cardiac breath-holds. The images are combined into a single volume with a T1-weighted sequence and segmented using an active appearance model (AAM) [1]. The segmentation results are then used to estimate the deformation field in the T1-weighted sequence by registration of the 3D ventricular surfaces. The deformations are mapped to the original images using a second AAM, and local principal strains are computed for the endocardium, myocardium, and epicardium as defined by the maximum strain b7e8fdf5c8
