

In the Lands Between, a place between life and death, a Tarnished Lord was once trying to hide a terrible secret... The story of this mysterious character begins with him wandering the vast world of Nephilim as a newly created character with a few pieces of equipment in his possession. His method of travel is currently unknown. You can witness his gradual progression in a game of "Guide". The Concept of "Guide" A game where you can treat the adventure from the point of view of a character that you play as a "guide". Playable Characters You can play as a Tarnished Lord, the daughter of a Tarnished Lord, a female Tarnished Lord, a strong warrior, or as a male Tarnished Lord. You can also switch between protagonists mid-game. Game Design Philosophy We aim to provide a refreshing action RPG through the use of the elements that we have explored over the course of making FINAL FANTASY games. We want players to enjoy a new fantasy action RPG through the discoveries made as they progress. EQUIPMENT CUSTOMIZE THE LOOK OF YOUR CHARACTER Choose the gender and appearance of the protagonist. EXPERIENCE OUR HARDWARE-BASED MECHANICS AND DIGITAL HANDLEBAR, AND BEAUTIFY YOUR CHARACTER WITH THE POWERS OF THE EXTRAS. The world will encounter many opportunities in your journey through the Lands Between. Whenever you encounter a location, you can use the "Map" function to know the current status of the location and its surroundings. If there is a treasure, it will be filled with a mysterious presence. It is extremely unlikely that you will encounter a general quest. Rather, explore the world using "Find" or "Use" as you head toward your destiny. New Character Types! You may also obtain items from NPC's and "Opal" is not an item but a precious resource, no matter how you obtain it, it will not be released when you check the item inventory.

It would be much easier to use a WMS (Windows MSSMatrix) like that. Probably also faster then getting all the sub-items by clicking on them. And then, they could put something in it like "Click here to check the current price, or press ctrl to go to the trading system" and so forth. Something must be done about this. Lucky for you, this is a point that we can easily address. Larry will visit DAP and discuss the subject. No need to involve Dorothy. You're obviously becoming a quarry for honest, insightful questions. It'd also be great to get bits and bytes from more people at this stage to get a more accurate viewpoint from a wider community. We will, when we get closer to first release, add another layer of interest to the total mix. Advertising and marketing may also come into play. It's impossible for us to produce a product without knowing what interest DAP doesn't currently have, and with a wider reach the ways and means in which we might achieve this with you still an unresolved question mark. Thanks for the comments. I don't think it is impossible, but being formative is not easy.

She claims to be offended by my clueless acceptance by culture without inquiry, rejecting brands without concern, and listening to rap without shame. Basically, she tries to make me squirm whenever I partake in the wilder excesses of American culture, which is tantamount to nearly ything I do. "We already know why people kidnap babies and eat them" she sneers. "What are you thinking, buying Häagen-Dazs Ice Cream when it's hot out? Using profanity on TV when it's appropriate? Getting drunk on $2 Budweiser? re not a real American." I'm not sure I'm capable of giving in to such bitterness. Imagine how ugly it would be to be my niece. Or how much more hostile the adult world would be to my rambunctious teenage girl, for pointing out her ved family's mistakes. Fortunately for me, she inherited tact from our mom, who made it her life's mission to teach her daughter how to behave. "Women and brown people have been oppressed for thousands of years so could you please talk about it" she explains carefully. "Everyone just have to learn." Still, whether her argument is valid of the point of the
