□Kappa: Fragments of the Myth -review-□ #02.9 Desert is the best □Kappa: Fragments of the Myth -review-□ Good ★★★★★ There's a gap in the quality of fantasy RPG's after the release of the latest Final Fantasy games. There isn't a popular player choice in the genre, so the only choice is between walking all over the same world over and over again with the same character or creating your own fantasy with an original story and setting, which makes it a hassle to check out what's going on in other parts. Thankfully, Kapp's a new project which doesn't give a fuck and instead focuses on creating a brand new world, so there's a lot of potential in the story and setting which has a lot of scope to be expanded upon. The visual style is by far the best thing to come out of the fantasy genre since Final Fantasy, so I'm happy to hear that there's a new direction here. The visuals are a mixed bag: the land and sea are wonderful to look at, but the characters and enemies look inconsistent. Fortunately, there's a lot of imagination put into the world, so you shouldn't have too much trouble looking at the world in the different regions which is definitely where the most growth in visual terms will come from. In terms of gameplay, this is where most of the fun happens, and where it also falls a little short. The game definitely has a unique feel, which makes it much more enjoyable than some of the other RPG's I played earlier in the year. Overall, the gameplay has a very light side with only moderate stat bonuses, so the focus is entirely on making things feel exciting with things like shocking enemies or evading traps to set off the magic of the ring. There's a surprising amount of depth in the combat system, which makes it interesting to explore the different elements. The biggest gripes are the camera which can be distracting, and a lack of connectivity online, since one of the best parts of the fantasy RPG genre is meeting others online and traveling together, which is a shame since I would have been interested to travel with other players like in Tower of Heaven. What's new in Elden Ring:

Tiffany and the San Francisco Giants "Tiffany" is the biggest name in footwear from Tiffany & Co. and the official footwear of the San Francisco Giants as of 2001. It was first worn in 1947, by the Johnny Grimm, who played for the then-Stillwater Giants at 12 wins and 4 losses. Differences between the Giants' and Tiffany's original "Tiffany" shoes can be found on the team's website. The Tiffany-Giants relationship began in 1947, when the former opened their first flagship store in San Francisco at 555 Market Street in the heart of the city. The Georgia-born "Mr. Tiffany", Wesley Tiffany, who wore size 15-1/2 shoes at the time, was inspired by his favorite team the New York Giants, who would be the next to don his graphic shoes after the Giants signed a long-term merchandising agreement with Tiffany in April 1951. Tiffany's relationship with the San Francisco Giants really took off in 1971, when the team won its first World Series. The key to their success was the marketing effort by the San Francisco Giants, headed by then-vice president, Frank Kennedy, to make sure fans knew where to go when they needed a Giants hat or a new pair of Crocs. Tiffany got on the bandwagon by creating a print ad in September 1971, in which the Giants were depicted as dogs trying to be socks in a pair of Tiffany's. Tiffany hosted an exclusive release party at the company's headquarters in Manhattan in April 1995, to celebrate the first anniversary of the opening of the San Francisco store. The Giants released a Tiffany-inspired line of baseball accessories, including half-gloves, glove tags, and Catcher's and Pitcher's masks, as well as T-shirts, tie-on jewelry, and 3-D key chains. The first anniversary of the San Francisco store was also commemorated on a Tiffany-produced TV commercial. In 1999, the Giants and Tiffany added a fifth pair of shoes to the diamond and baseball-themed line. The shoes are especially popular during the season, when each member of the Giants gets an opportunity to get three pairs of the shoes. As of 2019, these are the "San Francisco Cream" and the "San Francisco Art Deco" models. Unlike the National Football League, which owns half of Tiffany's equity, therefore directing the sole purpose of sales towards the network, the San Francisco Giants
