How does the system work? FIFA 22 moves faster than ever thanks to a new system based on the collection of physical data from real players, similar to how athlete's movements are analyzed in the professional sport. Data is captured at the same time a game is being played, and is later analyzed and applied to the game, providing a brand new level of realism. For example, if you press a button, an on-screen player will start a sprint. The on-screen player will then accelerate at a constant speed, reacting to the player in real life. To simulate this in the game, the on-screen player must first accelerate, then once at a certain speed, the player's momentum must be reflected and transferred to the on-screen player, at which point the on-screen player can accelerate with the speed of the real player. This process is repeated during gameplay. The benefits of the HyperMotion tech Players in FIFA, football games and similar sports games have been using their natural body movements for years. But creating video games that use natural movements in human players is never easy as it requires a very large investment of time. FIFA 22 is the first game that enables you to move faster, more naturally, than ever before. How does the gameplay feel? The new "HyperMotion" technology allows football players to show their skills on the screen in a completely authentic manner. FIFA 22 is the first football game that enables players to sprint naturally. Realistic running animations are activated with less CPU load and for more action-packed moments. This gives players an extremely enjoyable experience. Leveraging the HyperMotion technology, FIFA 22 also brings a whole new kind of authentic tactical movement to the pitch. Players are not only able to fight for the ball, they are able to dodge a tackle, move into a better position, turn and even kick the ball, all thanks to real-life movements. Players react like real-life athletes, even in the final third of the pitch. How is the new movement and jumping system powered? The HyperMotion technology is based on data obtained from millions of movements captured over two and a half years at a professional football academy. The new "HyperMotion" system uses the actual position of the player in the game.

Features Key:

- Completing Career Mode and single player gaming scenarios with millions of soccer fans around the world is possible in FIFA 22 thanks to this new simulation of the sport.
- GAMECUBE, FIFA GO Extra, the FIFA Ultimate Team features, Smart Match and FIFA Street modes now updated with the new engine deliver a more authentic soccer experience, with enhanced visuals and animations, wider world of customisation.
- New offensive transitions powered by reactive AI complement the game's new, flexible structure.
- New momentum changes powered by reactive AI enhance the overall fluidity of play with all areas of the pitch affected by the new behaviour.
- This year, FIFA 22 introduces "HyperMotion Technology," which uses motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits. The data collected from player movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions is used to power FIFA 22 gameplay.
- Groundbreaking new features make FIFA the most captivating soccer game ever. All-22 Gameplay.
- THINGS WE LIKE: The addition of "HyperMotion Technology", a series of revolutionary advancements that captures the elusive, high-intensity and highly intelligent performances we see in live matches. The near on-pitch technology and software has allowed for a dramatic increase in player equipment, including speed-of-game intelligence, contextual awareness and movement autonomy - allowing Players to simulate real-life gliding and transitions more fluidly and more effectively - ultimately resulting in more realistic gameplay.
- THINGS WE DISLIKE: Not really sure to be honest.. :p
