The Eraser allows you to “erase” areas of an image without affecting the surrounding pixels. If you have used a spray can to get rid of your fingerprint on your monitor, you can achieve the same effect by erasing your spot with Photoshop. The Eraser allows you to target a certain area of the image you are erasing, which is useful when creating your own custom effects. The Healing Brush is a non-destructive brush that covers a large area and incorporates pixels from the surrounding areas. This allows you to eliminate objects from an image and replace them with textures that will blend seamlessly with the surrounding pixels. The Hand Brush is a brush that allows you to brush your hand across the surface of the canvas, creating a brushstroke effect. You can move the mouse around the image to make it appear more like a natural stroke. Brush menus are available to the user in every tool. They allow you to choose the size, shape, and hardness of the brush you create. You can make the stroke you draw look more like a pen stroke with a brush with a hardness of 6 or a more delicate line with a brush that is softer. Make a selection and you can make it larger, and a brush menu will let you choose the size of the brush and the hardness (or softness) of the brush. In fuel cells, a fuel gas containing hydrogen as a main component is supplied to an anode side, while an oxidizer gas containing oxygen as a main component is supplied to a cathode side, the hydrogen is electrochemically oxidized with the oxygen on the surface of an electrode to generate electricity, and the generated electrons are extracted as an electric current to be converted into chemical energy. At the same time, water generated as a by-product of the hydrogen electrochemical oxidation is discharged from the cathode side. In contrast, in a fuel cell, a fuel gas containing hydrogen as a main component is supplied to the anode side, while an oxidizer gas containing oxygen as a main component is supplied to the cathode side, the hydrogen is electrochemically oxidized with the oxygen on the surface of an electrode to generate electricity, and the generated electrons are extracted as an electric current to be converted into chemical energy. At the same time, the carbon contained in the anode electrode and the cathode electrode is oxidized and carbon dioxide is discharged from the cathode side. Fuel cells are classified into low temperature type fuel cells at 100° C. or below,
