If you're up for some fun, try out the Classy Bunny Girl costume set! It's a combination of cute bunny girl and cute bunny person. And also, it's a sexy bunny outfit. Boob window! It's so sexy! Source: Source: China's Socialist mega city, the buildings all have screens on their windows to protect against air pollution.

Sometimes, if the air quality is really bad, the windows would stay closed — and there would be nothing to see in the city. A new video by china.org.cn shows just how dark and deserted it can be during its worst pollution days — and the consequences of not wearing a mask. If you live in China, you might assume that public spaces are open to people of all ages — but in reality, there are many places where young people, foreigners, or just anyone who is of any gender can be told they're not allowed to go in. Want to show your support for free speech in Hong Kong by reading out the names of the 17 people barred from entering a Hong Kong restaurant? So it's no wonder that British bodyguard Thomas Cook, which is the biggest travel firm in Europe, is asking customers to share their hopes and fears for the future of the city as the political crisis continues. The firm has identified the 10 most important issues it's being asked for help with, ranging from the concept of "one country, two systems", through to food hygiene. For example, fears about demonstrations are high among its Chinese customers, who are concerned that they may be arrested or injured on the grounds that they are showing "disrespect" to the Hong Kong government. There is also a special section for those who are most concerned about the food they consume, with UK customers specifically worried about where their food and drinks come from. Another concern is how much money people will spend once tourists decide to return to the city. “We have a number of clients who are worried about whether they will find the same or similar discounts to be available,” said Thomas Cook spokesperson Simon Murray. “Others are concerned about whether they will be able to find basic commodities like bread, milk and eggs and are putting more store into what they buy.💎

//tags:ignore: Repeated text of IE6 and IE7 «Here in Victoria we use the "Red Barn" to display reptiles, arachnids and insect products for consumers to purchase. For the last few days the Red Barn windows and French doors in the display area have been defaced with paint on the outside. The paint appears to be extremely strong and dated on the defacement. The paint is red and has been applied to both sides of the doors and window frames. The paint is matching the colour of the windows and the seating on the gallery. The paint is consistent in thickness and is evenly distributed across the surface. The paint has been applied under the direction of the gallery by adult persons. We understand that the Gallery Manager and the Community are distressed by this matter and we want to reassure them that these persons will be apprehended and prosecuted. The action of the persons is wrong and contrary to the law. The Museum since its opening has been fortunate to have many generous donors, including the Heritage Lottery Fund who provided substantial support for the exhibition. We will be continuing to work with the police to seek the identities of the offenders.» Sir, I don't want to be judgemental, but would this not be considered vandalism, irrespective of the allegations being contested? I'm certainly no criminal lawyer. But if you do the damage out of spite it is only contempt of court. I know. I had a friend in the district who enjoyed telling me about the fines he had to pay to the big Lexus in neighbouring office for doing exactly the same thing. Not with paint but a bungee cord to the window frame. I think that can be argued by the gallery as to whether the window was damaged, or if the paint was sprayed to mock the originals. Apparently some banks often did that with their windows, although I'd never really thought of it before. But if the paint is clearly issued through a shop, that might well be wilful damage and not just spray paint. "There is no other picture, painted from life, like the portraits of the Earl of Essex and of the Earl of Southampton, by the hand of Hol
