Hundreds of indigenous tribes, descendants of the Incas and Aztecs, and visitors gather here to contemplate Duque's immaculate landscape. It's named after former President José Manuel Duque Ibarra, who built the jungle roads that connect the park and helped Brazil's youth education system, and is home to some 300 plant species. Here you can discover some of Rio's newest monuments, while more laid-back off-the-beaten track trails reveal how the locals live. After a rainy season in the New World, Iberia has entered the almighty growing season: buds are bursting, flowers are blooming and the days are getting longer, promising perfect conditions for a perfect wine. With your mouth watering, go ahead and plan your next trip to Spain. The summer of 1848 at La Boca Chica in Buenos Aires has been etched on many people's memory, and most are not too fond of the tragic end of the story. On the 28th of August, 25,000 soldiers set up camp in La Boca Chica, 17 kilometres from the city centre, and surrounded a small group of patriots from among the Mameluke clan of the city. After a few hours of fighting, the city centre was liberated. However, the other side got away, including by 20 Argentine prisoners. After a few more skirmishes, the patriots were overwhelmed. Some are classic while others deserve recognition as unforgettable gems. We have selected 50 incredible wines, committed to give you a real appreciation of the great varieties that Argentina has to offer. Plus, we look at certain wines that, in our opinion, have specific characteristics that make them unique. They are our top picks because they have won us over or because we think they are great classics or simply because we think they are delicious. A new hot spot for foodies. In order to clarify the mechanisms involved in familial (FH) arterial and venous hypertension, we measured endothelium-dependent vasodilation, coronary flow reserve, coronary artery distensibility, and regional myocardial function in both FH and control subjects. Endothelium-dependent vasodilation was significantly lower in FH subjects with respect to control subjects. Coronary flow reserve and coronary artery distensibility were similar in both groups, as were left ventricular and right ventricular function, with the exception of the negative inotropic effect of volume overload. These findings suggest that endothelial dysfunction contributes to the pathophysiology of venous hypertension.Dear Tana, ENA's annual meeting and Exposition is being held May 30 - June 1 at the Hyatt Regency in Chicago, Illinois.
