To evaluate the hemodynamic effects of a high intra-abdominal pressure (IAP) on the cardiovascular system during percutaneous nephrolithotomy (PCNL). A prospective study was performed on 26 patients (18 males, 10 females; mean age 38 years) undergoing PCNL between November 2006 and August 2007. Patients were evaluated hemodynamically using a noninvasive finger pulse oximeter. A diagnostic procedure consisting of access to the renal tract through a percutaneous approach using 18 G Amplatz sheath, renal access, stone fragmentation and stone extraction was performed. The patients were assigned to two groups according to the IAP applied during the procedure, namely, 15 and 20 mm Hg (group A and group B, respectively). Following the procedure, the IAP was tapered to 5 mm Hg in both groups. The parameters measured were mean arterial pressure (MAP), heart rate (HR), pulse oximetry (SpO(2)), respiratory rate (RR) and the percutaneous procedure time. In group A, there was a significant decrease in the values of MAP (126+/-15 vs. 104+/-13 mm Hg, p=0.001), HR (90+/-10 vs. 68+/-10 bpm, p=0.001), SpO(2) (98+/-2 vs. 95+/-3%, p=0.016) and a significant increase in the procedure time (90+/-26 vs. 24+/-16 min, p=0.001

: Hallucinogenic Drugs What’s in your Pickle? by Alison Holland on January 9, 2015 Before my first try with acid I’d been stressing about what to expect, getting fear-mongering warnings like “You won’t know what to do and you’ll want to jump out the car and run into the shop and get something immediately which then leaves a WIDE open window for a dick move, and they’ll see that you’ve taken an acid trip (what worse thing in the world could a newbie do than that, you guys?)”. I had hoped that the smiles on their faces as they came into the shop behind my car on my first trip would make my fears up and there we’d be, ricocheting from one happy feel to another as the dose faded and everyone took my word for it. Of course, as it happens, it didn’t go like that. I took the duo-tab down, sat in the corner of the gallery toilet, peering at the A-Z wall with my finger at my face, and broke into tears. The drugs had penetrated the defenses of my accosted brain-cells, I was overcome by a sense of betrayal. I had invested a lot in this, and it just wasn’t working for me. I had returned the little stone Ace of Spades, and now I just felt nauseous and tired. The staff all looked so happy, and they weren’t even taking it! I was so, so unhappy about how it had turned out. I was in real danger of taking the weekend’s dose real seriously, had no plan for the future. I had even quite seriously considered driving to one of my research institutions and handing myself in. So I put the drugs away and biked home, and didn’t take them again for the next forty years. Yet the long spells of not taking acid are frustrating. The feeling of dread that builds when you get low and you need to take more is a powerful impediment to getting on it. If you’re on the trip, as you’ve been so carefully not to run out yet, and then suddenly it seems, you’ll be a very sad creature indeed if you do. I think many people have a bit of a rollercoaster experience with acid, during which they sit at the
