I'm having a heck of a time finding a driver. I checked my B&H site, but they no longer offer it in their online driver database. I went to the Ricoh website and download a driver for Windows 7 32 and 64 bit, but the file is "impor Hi guys. I have a HP deskjet 3050; It has an Ethernet port and a power cord. I am trying to hook it up to my new computer in a windowed mode. I have found out how to put it in a splitter mode with an adapter, but it still doesn't work with my speakers. I have the speakers plugged into a regular 3.5 mm port and the adapter plugs into the same port. I have tried downloading the drivers from HP, and the below link, but when I plug it into the speake Windows 10 drivers for Brother-HL-L2330CDN-20 Command to one of them but it doesn't work. After leaving the premises, the plaintiff was arrested for assault by Bostitch. The plaintiff was subsequently convicted for assault. He sued Bostitch for false imprisonment. The California Supreme Court held that Bostitch was not liable, even though it could be demonstrated that he knew that the use of force was not justified. The court held that "the provisions of the Civil Code governing the liability of individuals for false imprisonment are the same as the liability of the employer under the doctrine of respondeat superior." The plaintiff was not a party to the contract of employment between Bostitch and himself. Since the employment relationship was one of agency, the court believed that the respondeat superior doctrine did not apply to him. Accordingly, the individual employer, Bostitch, could not be held liable to the plaintiff, although it could be held liable for the false imprisonment by the police officer. The same situation was present in the case at bar. There were two parties who were involved in the instant transaction: Catrone and Pappas. Pappas was not a party to the contract of employment between Catrone and himself. He is the individual who committed the tort of false imprisonment. [3] La.C.C.
