A: For this part The image is being used by mobarecord.com. If you want to view content like this from another website, it's generally considered not to be strictly legal. For example, through a bookmark, you can link to: It's a bit more complicated than this, but basically, if the browser makes that request, and you provide the onerror handler, which provides the link to the image, the browser downloads the image, rendering it like that. The src on the img tag will be: Now that you've downloaded the image, you'll want to check that that's a valid image file, download it if it is, and run through a validator to make sure it's not infected or something.
