i wrote this book to help parents bring out the strength in their kids and more importantly the common sense and the courage they need to lead them toward success and life fulfillment. we must build a strong foundation of values in our kids to prepare them for the journey in life. this is my humble effort to inculcate the most fundamental values of india, mother india, shreemati rama, - love, forgiveness, gratitude, acceptance, sharing, caring, humility, sense of responsibility and the rest of it. this book is my first book in the big wide world and what i learnt about myself and the world in the process. its a book of life for all ages to enjoy. this is the result of my experience as a child psychotherapist and marital counselor. i find that counseling works on many levels. my aspiration is to provide insights, tools and support to parents to help them raise their children right. i hope this book will benefit parents and help them see their children through a different lens. i am a psychotherapist who has been working in child therapy for last 18 years and a parenting coach for last 2 decades. this book is my attempt to provide a comprehensive approach to helping parents understand the essence of their child and help them see their child from new perspectives. its unique approach for parents to help them take actions to raise their kids. my third book is a collaborative effort with my co-authors i.e. i have worked together on the cover designing, layout, interior designing, editing and proofreading. i wanted to present the fascinating aspects of indian mythology in a simple manner to parents and children across the globe. i have learnt that now many of the children also connect with mythologies. it seems it brings them closer to the part of their culture. when we create more awareness for myths, they would bring in more meaning to life. for us, going back to indian mythology is a sign of connecting with our own roots.
