But, statistics show that these funding streams are often oversubscribed, and only a small percentage of the projects listed on the crowdfunding platforms are fully funded. Some people leverage the success of their project to generate local or national media attention which boosts their chances of funding in the following months. Hosting events is an affordable way to generate money, exposure, and publicity. Creative people need to differentiate themselves from their competitors. This can be a challenge if they are in a crowded marketplace. Doing some research about the events currently being hosted in your city area can help you brainstorm what you wish to have happen over the next few months. A new idea or product does not mean that it is going to be a success or a reality. Marketing and advertising is a necessary part of any new business. Can you afford to not promote your Airbnb properties to outsiders? It is often easier to learn from others who have experience in your subject.
