For overall image adjustment, you can use the Adjustment panel. The Adjustment panel allows you to play with the color balance, contrast, brightness, and the levels. The Adjustments panel can be used to make changes to brightness, color, contrast, and contrast for an image. You can also use the Gradient function of the Adjustment panel to create a gradient fill and the Shadow function to lighten or darken shadows. Once you make adjustments, they are available to view on one layer. To do this, you need to use the Photoshop Layers > Add a new Layer option. This will bring up a new layer on the layered Photoshop document. You can preview the result on the new layer and add more effects if you desire. Once you have your new layer just created please click on the Layer > Layer Mask option to enable layer masks. Layer masks are the second layer list, where each layer on an image can be turned on or off for a specific effect. You need to use the Layer > Layer Mask option. This will bring up a layer mask overlay on the layer you have just added. When you add a layer mask on a layer, the image appears darker than before. This decreases the opacity of the layer. In some situations, you need to go to the Layer > Layer Mask > Unlock function to adjust the layer mask. This may be done to remove a layer mask that does not need to be changed or followed by unlocking the layer mask function to develop the layer mask. In Photoshop CC the layer mask function is a little bit different.
